Q. But tell me, if you would, what management systems you put in that would have taken all possible precautions against this kind of problem? . . . What specifically have you done to put in place changes that reduce the likelihood of these kinds of accidents that BP has a history of being involved in?

A. I believe our operating management system in the Gulf of Mexico is as good as anyone. I can't point to any deficiencies to point out to you. The investigations are obviously going to be important in terms of if there was something missed. I know of nothing that points me in a direction that we have deficiencies in our operating management system.
