Sounds good. We just need a different direction going forward

Me, Paul, and Jonathan were discussing these issues this morning. We three were of the opinion that going out next week late would put you in a position to take the "lead" and display ownership to the onshore and offshore wells team with surrounding the issues of tightening up the PPFG detection issues. I personally would prefer to have this in play in a section we have already drilled with you there to make sure we implement this appropriately. This would involve conversations with the PPFG experts, wellsite geologists, and mudloggers to ensure all real time PPFG detection criteria are being monitored and communicated to the entire well delivery team. You would be the accountable person - meaning I do not want you to leave that rig until you are 100% convinced we are in the right place going forward.

Bellow ok with this? Some of the office and logistical BS would fall in his lap... I'll start making plans to go after we drill the sidetrack 13 5/8" section. No sense in being out there for that. We should know exactly where to spot the CSG.

Awesome suggestion and I agree - opportunity to reengage with the wellsite team, get us all back on the same page, and personally an opportunity for you to take ownership of our delivery for the remainder of this well.

Thank you.

Boss,

What do you think about putting me on the wellsite for the remainder of Macondo? The way I see it, the past couple well events have been preceded by subtle indicators that were either not recognized, or not properly communicated. I think we might benefit from both having an extra set of eyes on the wellsite, and having a different communication dynamic from myself communicating with Jon and Paul in the office. We certainly have operations support in the office. Additionally, It will provide me an opportunity to amass wellsite experience for the operation geology ADP. Let me know your thoughts. I think, in general, that we need a change. I would go out for the final hole sections after the we set the 13 5/8" CSG in the sidetrack.
