

U.S. Government Findings on Health Effects

"Surveillance reveals no trends of public health concern related to the oil spill."

"... analyses of ... air samples for VOCs ... found air concentrations that would not likely result in long term health effects to residents ..."

"After the oil spill, environmental agencies sampled the air for these VOCs. . . the levels that were found were very low and are not likely to result in any increase in cancer risk or long term health effects."
