Was there a target missed because an opportunity passed because no decision made?
 o Probably yes. There were probably shoreline impacts (when the use of dispersants was delayed for a period of time, for weather or decision delays).

Focus Area: Dispersants/In-Situ Burning
 See Question 5

Question 6: What was your role in deciding on the use of dispersants or in-Situ Burning? Were you involved with the use of subsurface dispersants? Did you follow protocols from the plans and procedures or did you have to deviate to address real-world issues?

Focus Area: ESAs
 See Question 5

Question 7: 1. How are the ESAs addressed in the response plan?
 2. What is the process for identifying ESAs location and protection strategies?
 3. Should contingency planning and preparedness include site-specific strategies, tactics, equipment, personnel, resources, critical passages, etc.?

Final Question 1: What were the top 2 "best practice(s)" during this incident, from your perspective?

- The setup of response organization went well, with the ICPs and UAC; although the NIC should have been integrated with UAC.
- In situ burning was a huge success – moving resources out there was done well.
- Even though constrained with the usage of dispersants, the use of dispersants in general was a big win.
- Overall, burning, dispersing, and skimming was successful. If you look at the shoreline impact, it is relatively minimal compared to the amount of oil spilled (it would have been better without being constrained).

Final Question 2: What do you assess to be the top 1 "areas needing improvement" (or downright "failures") from your perspective, and do you have any related recommendations regarding these areas?
 o There was too much Parish involvement, which brought in too many political problems.
 o Recommendation: Involve Parish Presidents in ACP process and up to speed on ICS.
