

Larry Dietrick

Representing the Pacific States – British Columbia Oil Spill Task Force and the State of Alaska, Mr. Dietrick provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the State perspective and used his extensive knowledge of response technologies and contingency planning to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

John Cunningham

Representing the Environmental Protection Agency, Mr. Cunningham provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the Federal Government's perspective and used his extensive knowledge of dispersants and response technologies to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

Alex Joves

Representing the Department of Homeland Security, Mr. Joves provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the Department's perspective and used his extensive knowledge of the National Response Framework and situational awareness to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

David Behler

Representing the Department of the Interior, Mr. Behler provided valuable insight on the preparedness and response from the Department's perspective and used his extensive knowledge of the National and Regional Response Teams to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

David Moore

Representing the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, Regulation and Enforcement's, Mr. Moore provided valuable insight on Deepwater Drilling regulations and processes and used his extensive knowledge of offshore preparedness and response to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

Barbara Parker

Representing the State of Maine, Mrs. Parker provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the State perspective and used her extensive experience in the incident command system and contingency planning to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

Randy Shaneyfelt

Representing the State of Alabama, Mr. Shaneyfelt provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the State perspective and used his extensive knowledge of contingency planning and external communications to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

James Ayers

Representing the Non-governmental organizations and conservation community, Mr. Ayers provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the environmental

Ex 11991

Worldwide Court Reporters, Inc

community's perspective and used his extensive knowledge and experience with environmentally sensitive areas to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

Bruce Johnson

Representing the American Petroleum Institute, Mr. Johnson provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the petro-chemical industry perspective and used his extensive knowledge of response technologies and the incident command system to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

Greg Pollock

Representing the State of Texas's General Land Office, Mr. Pollock provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the State perspective and used his extensive knowledge of Regional Response Teams and contingency planning to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

Brian House

Representing the Spill Control Association of America/Association of Petroleum Industry Cooperative Managers (SCAA/APICOM), Mr. House provided valuable insight on preparedness and response from the oil spill response industry perspective and used his extensive knowledge of response technologies and Deepwater Horizon experience incident to greatly enhance the Work Group production.

John Tarpley

Representing the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Mr. Tarpley provided valuable insight on the preparedness and response from the Agency's perspective and used his extensive knowledge of environmental science, technology and scientific support teams to greatly enhance the Work Group production.