We can acknowledge that we had the cementing work on the rig. Transocean's website describing the rig says specifically that the cementing equipment on the Horizon was ours under a third party contract. Beyond that, we should not comment on what operations were happening at the time of the accident or what caused the accident, but instead need to say that Transocean and BP are conducting the investigation into what happened and we don't know anything further.

Should we acknowledge that we performed the cementing work on the well? Is there anything else we should say?
